Healthy Early Years (HEY) Quality Assurance Report

Quality assurance July 21st 2026

HEY features three key areas; good practice was identified in each area:

Meeting the needs of the range of children	Contribution to children's wellbeing	Leadership and management
A good example of how the setting identified a child with a need, sought the expertise of the Speech and Language Therapy team and together supported the child effectively. Lovely example of supporting a child working with both the physiotherapist and the parent. Good range of strategies, information and use of external stadd to support children with differing speech and language needs and development.	It is excellent that the setting utilises local parks to support the children's physical development Good support for children and families, encouraging good oral health and hygiene. Good strategies, ideas and activities to support healthy eating and nutrition. Lovely examples of supporting children's interests.	The setting demonstrates a good understanding of the Incredible Years Programme. It is excellent the Manager and Senco visited New River Green Children's Centre and learnt about so many services which their families would be able to access. Staff are well supported and listened to, in a variety of formal and informal ways.

Additional information:

The visit coincided with the first day of the summer term holidays. I was able to visit all rooms and the outside play area but due to low numbers, all children were playing in one area. Staff arrival was staggered according to need. We discussed some aspects of the morning, but this was attributed to the adaptation of the summertime adaptation.

Next steps

To ensure Nanny Jane's continues to develop their work to support children and families' health and wellbeing, we discussed some areas for development:

To continue to be a reflective and proactive setting, which strives to ensure the best outcomes for children and families.

Once settings are recognised as a Healthy Early Years (HEY) setting, they are expected to continue to monitor activities, ensure the standards continue to stay in place and develop their work further. Recognition remains in place for three years.

Conclusion

Nanny Jane's provides a strong foundation for supporting children's health and wellbeing and they demonstrate a commitment for further and ongoing developments in this area. We are delighted to recognise them as an Islington Healthy Early Years (HEY) setting, which is very well deserved!
